WORLD - Sugar taxes transfer calorie consumption: Coca Cola CEO

The CEO of Coca Cola argued that imposing a tax on sugar-sweetened beverages was not an effective way to address obesity because it does not consider other calorie sources and might just cause people to switch to other untaxed products. Instead, Coca Cola is reducing the sugar content in some drinks and expanding its portfolio to include healthier products, he noted.

'Sales of aspartame should be suspended': EFSA accused of bias in safety assessment

22-Jul-2019 By Katy Askew

EFSA's decision-making process may have been biased by 'conflicts of interest' and the distribution and sale of aspartame in the EU should be suspended, says the author of a new research dossier calling the safety of the sweetener into question.
